WARNING!!

It is estimated that 1-2 children out of 10 are diagnosed with ADHD. At the same time statistics also indicate that 1 out of every 4 of these children may have an undetected visual condition that leads to poor concentration, poor academic performance and negative "behavioral changes". This means that a child having difficulty in school is 2 times more likely to actually have an undetected visual condition and is now at greater risk for the mis-identification and mis-diagnosis of ADHD!

Imagine a mom sitting before a panel of 3 educators and 3 health professionals being told that she "must" medicate her child and if she does not comply, her child would not be allowed to return to school and her name would be given to CPS.

Imagine parents feeling like they have "no choice" but to comply against their better judgement, feeling heartbroken as their child cries out because of how awful the ADHD medication makes them feel only to have a result of no significant improvements academically. This is a harrowing and tragic predicament for any parent and child to be faced with.

If only these weren't real stories of real people who's lives have been negatively impacted by this very issue. SOLUTION?...As more awareness is brought to the forefront, this can be prevented.

An undetected visual problem left undetected and mis-diagnosed as ADHD ultimately means that a child's potentially bright future is now seriously compromised.
